Health & Safety at Work: Worker's Rights

“Three Fundamental Worker Rights Provide The Foundation On Which An Effective Occupational Health and Safety Program is Built:

- 1) Workers have the “Right To Know” about dangers in the work environment;
- 2) Workers have the “Right To Participate” in the day-to-day detection, evaluation and reduction of workplace hazards;
- 3) Workers have the “Right To Refuse” to work in conditions known or believed to be dangerous.

These Rights are the law in Manitoba and workers can exercise these Rights without fear of repercussions.
